CHIEF PARRIS' SUMMARY. The chief says in his summary: "I have submitted a general increase of 25 per cent. on the salaries of all employes, one-half to go to the pension fund, which is at present almost exhausted. I would earnestly urge upon you the justice of the increase. duties of the firemen are such that their lives are frequently risked in their endeavor to save their fellow-beings and to save and pro-tect valuable property. This fact was fully dem-onstrated at the recent serious conflagration at the Knox express fire, when three of my men were killed and some six or seven in-jured in such a way that it will be almost im-possible for some of them to do active duty again. Even with the increases I have asked the salaries of the men would be far below that of other eities.

that of other cities
"The pension fund is in a very bad condition financially. At the present time there is deducted from the pay of 138 members the sum of #1 per month, making a total for one year of #1,656. We are paying to twelve pensioners #385 per month, or #4,620 per year, showing an annual deficit of #2,964.

pensioners $385 per month, or $4,620 per year, showing an annual deficit of $2,984. The only way in which the department can overcome the deficiency is by receiving donations, giving annual excursions, selling tiekets, and appealing to the generous public of Washington and vieinity. I do earnestly hope that Congress will see the necessity of prompt action and grant our request for aid, such as would obviate the necessity of our becoming objects of charity.

"There are now in the department twelve men who are eligible for retirement. I would most earnestly recommend that they be placed upon the pension roll, or assigned to duty as watchmen, and new strong, ablebodied men be appointed in their places."

The saving to apparatus would, he declares, more than justify the outlay for the machinist and engineer asked for; the saving of time in subduings fire suggests the request for a new truck for Company B; the new hose for Engine Company No. 2 is required in the interest of the health of the men, the new engine company is for use in Anacostia, and is suggested by reason of the great need there for protection against fire; and as Congress has already provided for house, lot, and furniture in the tion against fire; and as Congress has already provided for house, lot, and furniture in the northeast section, but failed to provide for the men, the chief recommends action to com-plete arrangements for the equipment of a ompany.

The chief concludes by saying that as he has only asked for such things as he actually requires he hopes the Commissioners will urg upon Congress the necessity for the appro-priation.

Joseph K. Potter, secretary of the Federation of Labor of the District, addressed a letter, under date of the 10th instant, to the Commissioners, requesting in behalf of organized labor that the laws regulating elevators be enforced, sepecially those in buildings in course of crection. Reference was made to the accident at the Schneider flats, and the opinion expressed that had the regulations been made operative the disaster might have been avoided. The letter was referred to the inspector of elevators by Building Inspector Entwisle, who reported that no regulation exist governing the construction or operation of such holss as are used by contractors and others for elevating building materials, and recommended that a regulation be made compelling contractors and builders to protect others for elevating building materials, and recommended that a regulation be made compelling contractors and builders to protect the openings or hoistings, by proper guarrails, safety attachments and automatic doors. Mr. Entwisle returned the communication to the Commissioners yesterday indorsing the foregoing recommendation. Complaint was recently lodged with the Commissioners that the services of the colored religious congregation in Schott's alley on First street, between B'and C streets northeast, were conducted with unnecessary disturbance to the neighborhood. The complaint was referred to Lieut, Heffner, of the turbance to the neighborhood. The com-plaint was referred to Lieut. Heffner, of th Ninth precinct, who reported that he had ex-acted a premise that the services should be more quietly conducted and closed before 1 o'clock p. m. He suggested that the only other means of preventing the disturbanc would be by indictment. Major Moore yes terday forwarded the report to the Commi

The meeting at Bricklayers' Hall last night to further preparations for the observance of Labor Day was well attended, and a great deal or routine business was transacted.

One of the first matters presented was a response from President Cleveland and Vice President Stevenson to the invitation extended to each to review the parade. The President's reply was in the usual form of such communications, signed by his private secretary, as follows: "Your letter to the President, inviting him

"They belonged to my son, Hardy, who is dead; and I shall not sell them," the mother sald, without any emotion in her voice, and they did not ask him to sit down, and attributed the uneasiness of the deaf and purblind dog to another cause—suspicion.

So he left them and walked away, and they had to lock up the dog to prevent him from following the suspicious stranger.

The next morning he did not rise, and when they inquired after him he was really dead, having slept the sleep that knows no waking, and it made no little gossip and comment, because it was not even a case of sulcide, so far as anybody could find out.

They buried him as strangers are buried with scant ceremony, but in a bit of earth that his own money had paid for, when his effects were sold. When the old man who was rounding off the turf finished his work a woman, young and timid, stepped up and alipped some money into his hand.

"To keep his grave clean," she said, and was gone.

Being dead he could never know it, but perhaps it was just as well.
